SOCIAL and PERSONAL

Mr. and Mrs. Eppa Hunton, Jr., were hosts at dinner last evening in honor of the Governor of Virginia and Mrs. Henry C. Stuart. The dinner, which was one of the handsomest entertainments of the kind ever given in Richmond, took place at the Jefferson Hotel, and covers were laid for fifty-two. The reception room, where Mr. and Mrs. Hunton received with Governor and Mrs. Stuart, was banked with palms and bay trees and set with flowered blue shrubs in fancy pots. American Beauty roses in tall wicker stands were arranged at intervals around the room, and a stringed orchestra played throughout the evening.

Dinner was served in the Blue Room, and the guests were seated at one long table decorated in exquisite pink flowers caught up with blue crystal gauze. The centerpiece was formed of three tall, low baskets, filled with Killarney roses and pink snapdragons, and festooned with the blue gauze ribbon and the flat plaques, out of which the baskets were lifted on tall pedestals. The baskets were also filled with Killarney roses and snapdragons. Four tall silver vases filled with Easter lilies, pink roses, white lilies and lilies were arranged at the ends of the table, and there were no candles, only quaint round baskets of primroses, pink sweet peas and white lilies that formed nests for the burning candles. The table was charming small silver vases of freesia, pink sweet peas and primroses, and the mantel and windows were decorated in quantities of apple blossoms, roses and white lilies.

The places of the women were marked with fascinating grandmother nosegays, edged with a lace frill and made of lilies of the valley, sweet peas, violets, gardenias and pansies, and gardenias for the men.

Mrs. Stuart wore a handsome imported gown of magenta-colored velvet, made with a court train and finished with silver lace. The bodice was embroidered in pearls and cut sapphires, and she wore the famous old Carter pearls. Mrs. Hunton's gown was fashioned of palest pink chiffon, brocaded in velvet flowers and draped over a chapeau of the same shade. The gown was embroidered in crystals, and she wore diamond ornaments.

Mr. and Mrs. Hunton had as their guests last evening to meet Governor the second of a series of State dinners in honor of the members of the General Assembly this evening. The dinner will be a most elaborate affair, and will take place at the Executive Mansion.

William H. White is entertaining at luncheon today at the Commonwealth Club in honor of Fairfax Harrison, president of the Southern Railway.

Mrs. Clifton will give a card party at the Jefferson Hotel to-day in honor of Mrs. Edward Chamber Goode, of Boydton.

At Home This Afternoon.

Mrs. Archer Anderson, of 143 West Franklin Street, will be at home to callers this afternoon between the hours of 4 and 7 o'clock. Mrs. Anderson will discontinue her at-homes during Lent.

Big Ball at the Richmond.

An interesting event of to-morrow will be the big Continental ball that is to take place in the ballroom of the Richmond Hotel at 9:30 o'clock under the direction of Miss Nora White. It is to be something altogether new and different, and plans for the affair are most unique. Invitations have been issued to all pupils of Miss White, and only one more will be given to women guests, will be admitted. The beautiful ballroom of the Richmond will be converted into a fascinating little cafe, for all the world like some Parisian place, and the tables will be arranged around the sides of the room, with a space cleared for dancing in the center. All sorts of lovely decorations will be used, and there are to be pretty favors and confetti for the guests. An orchestra will play the dancing, and this ball will probably be one of the most unique functions of the late winter season.

In Baltimore.

Mr. Boudar is visiting her daughter, Mrs. H. F. Page, of East Court, Baltimore, where she is being much entertained. Mrs. Boudar expects to remain in Baltimore until the end of this month.

Bishop O'Connor to Speak.

"Philanthropy" will be the subject of an interesting address to be made by the Right Rev. D. J. O'Connor, Bishop of Richmond, this afternoon at 8 o'clock in the hall of the St. Anne's Society in the hall of the Catholic Union. Each member has the privilege of inviting a friend.

Pretty Tea.

Miss Nellie Foster was hostess at a lovely social tea yesterday afternoon at her studio in the Hanover. The affair was in honor of her daughter, Mrs. Guy Dickerson, of Syracuse, N. Y., and the rooms were decorated entirely in spring flowers, a rustic basket of daffodils and tulips being used on the tea table. Mrs. Herman Strahl poured tea, and Mrs. Craig Polow and Miss Louise Sutton assisted.

To Attend Naval Hops.

Mrs. Arabella Hayes Dudley, who is now the guest of Mrs. Roy Hume at her home in Culpeper, will leave there on Thursday for Annapolis, Md., where she will attend the midwinter hops at the United States Naval Academy and St. John's Military School. Mrs. Dudley will be the guest of Miss Mildred Hays, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Brady, during her visit to Annapolis.

Returns to Boston.

Mrs. Flanders, who has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Ware B. Gay, at the Chestnut Hill Hotel, Elizabeth, Mass., has returned to her home in Boston, Mass. Mrs. Flanders is a charming woman, and many handsome admirers were given in her honor.

Charity Functions.

To-night the girls of the Equal Suffrage League of Richmond will give the play, "How the Vote Was Won," at the auditorium of the Jefferson Hotel. The orchestra will give after the performance for informal dancing, after which refreshments will be served. The members of the cast include Misses Voss, Johnson, Satterfield, Marie Leary, Mary Harris, Elizabeth Montgomery, Ruth Garrett, Elizabeth Winn and Messrs. Russell Coon and Walter Street.

The St. Andrew's Dramatic Circle will present a musical comedy at St. Andrew's Hall, corner of Cherry and Beverly Streets, this evening at 8:20 o'clock for the benefit of St. Andrew's choir. The play is entitled "The Buttermilk Hollow Surprise Party," and is under the direction of Mrs. W. H. Harrison.

Important Meeting.

A very important called meeting of the board of managers of the Virginia Home for Incapacities will be held on Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock at the home. The meeting includes the entire general board of the home, and since much important business is to be discussed, full attendance is desired.

At the Art Club.

A large audience will throng the parlors of the Art Club of Richmond this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock to hear Dr. L. A. Savre, of Montgomery, of Richmond, who will lecture on "Why We Should Read Dickens." Miss Adele Clark is chairman of the afternoon, and will introduce the speaker. It will be a very interesting occasion, and all interested are invited to attend.

Luncheon for Miss Jones.

Mrs. Henry Mansfield Cannon is giving a luncheon on Friday at the Commonwealth Club in honor of Miss Charlotte Jones. Only the married set has been included in the invitations.

At the Woman's Club.

Miss Anna Seaton-Schmidt, of Boston, delivered an address yesterday afternoon before the Woman's Club, the subject was "French Art and the Modern Spirit," and right happily did she expound it for her hearers. Miss Seaton-Schmidt is a woman of the greatest breadth of mind and vision, and it was through her eyes, that have looked upon the wonderful art of the world, that her audience caught a vision of achievement yet to be.

The speaker stated that, after all, art is not knowing how to paint or draw, but simply the capacity to tell the world something through a picture or statue. It is as old as the oldest civilization in the world, and is the thought of every age expressed upon canvas. The first French art came through their great cathedrals, and the French to-day lead the world in everything that is artistic, for all countries turn to France for inspiration. Paris is the Mecca of art, and there exist there to-day some wonderful and strange developments along that line.

Miss Seaton-Schmidt spoke of cubism and futurism as foam thrown up on a stormy sea—not an evolution, but a revolution. She said that the cubism of repression of the older artists, she made a splendid illustration of this new phase of art to the old lady tale, whom she ordered a garment, whom only the real seers might see, and all the courtiers and even the king himself were afraid to admit that they saw nothing. This art is a sign of the unrest of the twentieth century, this seeking for something new. It is a worthy ambition, for it is only those who seek that find. Paris permits things and does not at first condemn, but we take it much too seriously. Surely it is a very keynote of art, and Miss Seaton-Schmidt does not believe that the cubist and futurist art is sincere. Some day a great artist will arise to gather up all this new technique and give to the world a great art, but at present all of these "isms" that infest Paris are but the following of great leaders, the artists use their method and copying their faults without the genius.

SOLID YEAR OF MISERY

After a Solid Year of Misery, Bordering on Hopelessness, a Grateful Change Comes of a Sudden

Monticello, Ga.—Miss Tommie Bowden, of this town, says: "I suffered for one long year with serious womanly troubles—and it became so bad that I thought no remedy could cure my case."

I was nervous at times, and had a sick headache so bad that I could hardly bend over.

I tried two different kinds of medicine, but they did me no good.

I then began taking Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I hadn't used it but one day before I felt a great change. I continued taking it, and I know it saved my life. I believe it is worth its weight in gold.

I hope every lady who suffers from womanly trouble will try Cardui. I praise it to every lady I meet, and my sister also recommends it as the best of medicines for women."

Do you suffer from any of the numerous ailments so common to women, such as headache, backache, sideache, nervousness, sleeplessness, etc.? Have you that tired, weak, worn-out feeling? If so, we urge you to take Cardui, the woman's tonic. It has not only relieved thousands of women suffering from serious womanly ailments, but has also been found an excellent tonic for that tired-out feeling.

Get a bottle of Cardui to-day.

THIS ENGLISH PEER IS HANDY WITH HIS FISTS

Beats Burglar So Badly He Spends Several Weeks in Hospital.

BY LA MARQUISE DE FONTENAY.

LORD KINGSTON, ninth earl of his line, who has been spending the winter traveling about in the United States and Canada, and is now in New York, at the Manhattan Hotel, for a stay of some duration, is a peer extremely handy with his fists. For some years ago, on being awakened in the middle of the night by the presence of a burglar in his bedroom, at Killarney Castle, he administered such a vigorous thrashing to the foolish intruder that the man was laid up for several weeks in the hospital for pairs before he was in a condition to appear even before the magistrates.

Lord Kingston served through the Boer War, with the Irish Guards, in which he held a commission, and can boast of being that rare avia, a popular Irish landlord, although a Tory, since he believes in and practices the policy of encouraging his tenants to improve their holdings on his 40,000 acres of estates in County Roscommon, not only by means of financial assistance, but also giving them a secure tenure of their farms. He is very well off, being married to one of the daughters and heiresses of the late Sir Andrew Barclay Walker, of brewing fame. The estates have been in his family ever since the reign of Queen Elizabeth, who bestowed large grants in Roscommon upon his ancestor, Sir John King, in recognition of his military services.

The Earls of Kingston represent, in the female line, it is true, the White Knights, the quarter of the illustrious bearings by their own. Some 300 years ago John Fitzgerald, Lord of Dees and of Desmond, by virtue of his royal seignior, as Palatine of Ireland, created the title of his second marriage hereditary knights, and thus originated the titles of the White Knights, the Knight of Glyn, and the Knight of Kerry. The title of Knight of Kerry is borne to-day by Sir John Fitzgerald, owner of Valentia Island, off the coast of Kerry, and famous as a yachtsman. The acceptance by his father of a baronetcy was very generally condemned in Ireland, where it was agreed that a modern dignity of this kind was in every sense of the word inferior to the honor of being nineteen the hereditary Knight of Kerry.

The present Knight of Glyn is Desmond Fitzgerald, son-in-law of the Earl of Arundel, and there are many who believe that his wife, Lady Rachel Fitzgerald, as having accompanied her father to this country at the time of the Valkyrie races for the American cup. She died some years ago, after giving birth to a son, who will eventually succeed his father as twenty-second Knight of Glyn. The Knight of Glyn has no baronetcy, and though he has an official right, as hereditary knight, to the prefix of "Sir," he has refused to assume it, he refrains from using it, lest it should save too much of the ordinary knighthood.

The White Knights became extinct in the male line in the reign of Charles I. when their heiress married the first Lord Kingston, and thus brought their property into the King family.

One of the members of Lord Kingston's family has been immortalized by the poet Milton. For it was a son of Sir John King, the founder of the house, whose tragic death by drowning in the Irish Sea is commemorated by the blind bard in his "Lycidas."

Another member of the family, namely, the second Earl of Kingston, was hanged to a gallows in the eighteenth century tried for murder by the Irish House of Lords at Dublin and promptly acquitted. The drama had originated in the unparadise attentions of Colonel Fitzgerald, a married man, to an unmarried daughter of the earl.

The latter son, at that time known as Colonel King, and who afterwards became Lord Lorton, resolved to put an end to the matter by challenging Fitzgerald to a duel. The hostilities counter took place in Hyde Park, in London, but was interrupted before much damage had been done by the arrest of both combatants and of their seconds for breaking the peace.

Some months later Colonel King and his father, the earl, found that Colonel Fitzgerald was staying in disguise at an inn, in a village close to their place, at Mitchellstown, near Cork, and that he was making preparations to abduct the earl. Colonel King was engaged in a hand-to-hand encounter with Fitzgerald in the inn, and was getting the worst of it, when his father, Lord Kingston, rushed in and shot Fitzgerald dead.

Colonel King was tried by the ordinary courts, at Cork, and was acquitted by the jury of the charge of murder for which he had been indicted. Not long afterwards his father, Lord Kingston, was tried in the same way, by the Irish House of Lords at Dublin, and was acquitted. The last occasion of the upper house of the Irish legislature sitting as a court of justice upon one of its members. As stated above, Lord Kingston was acquitted by the unanimous vote of his fellow peers.

M. Goremykin's appointment on Thursday last to succeed Vladimir Kokovtsov, as Prime Minister of Russia, serves to recall the manner in which he was dismissed a number of years ago from the post of Minister of the Interior. It took place a few days after the great riots of the students of the University of St. Petersburg, 1893. Goremykin delayed for nearly a week making any report to the czar about the disturbances.

Nicholas resented strongly this neglect, and when the Minister of the Interior at length presented himself to his sovereign, he found the emperor on him in a manner amazing to those who had only known Nicholas up to that time as most gentle-mannered and quiet spoken. He overwhelmed Goremykin with reproaches for his conduct in the matter, and for his commission of other facts with which he had become acquainted, winding up by denouncing him as thoroughly incompetent and trustworthy. He thereupon turned his back upon Goremykin, and beckoning one of his aides-de-camp, commanded him to intimate to the crestfallen and thoroughly astonished minister that his audience was at an end, and that he had no further use for his services.

Almost a decade elapsed before Goremykin, who was succeeded as Minister of the Interior by the ill-fated Stolypin, assassinated by the nihilist Bolshakov in April, 1902, was restored to imperial favor.

Vladimir Kokovtsov's resignation of the premiership of the empire, and his health, is a distinct loss to the empire, and Nicholas has indicated his appreciation thereof by his bestowal of the rank of count upon his retiring Prime Minister—a rare distinction.

For the number of counts created by the Russian Emperors during the last hundred years is very small, indeed, and whereas Russian princes abound, Russian counts, that is to say, those counts who owe their dignities to the Muscovite crown and not to any foreign power, are few and far between.

Kokovtsov has enjoyed in a very exceptional degree the confidence and good will of the foreign money markets and of the leading financiers abroad, and is regarded in Paris, London and in Berlin, as having accomplished wonders with the Russian treasury. He owed his promotion to the rank of Premier to the surprising way in which he managed to maintain the equilibrium of the budget through the war with Japan, the revolution in the Caucasus, and a series of bad harvests, famine and epidemics, both of plague and of cholera, and to strengthen Muscovite credit at home and abroad to such an extent that Imperial government bonds have an average quotation of 98—a very high figure, when one bears in mind all that has been printed about economic conditions in the land of the Czar.

Kokovtsov, who, ever since 1890, has had a very active share in the management of the economic and financial policy of the empire, is a former lieutenant of Sergius de Witte, whose warm friendship he has retained, and whose family views he shares. It is owing to the liberalism of him that he has long been an object of hostile maneuvering on the part of the reactionary element, not only at court, but also within the government itself, and it is because of his liberal views he has been the subject of certain of his ministerial colleagues, who recently gave grave offense in France by embarking upon negotiations, since dropped, with the Krupp works for the financing of the Putikoff Steel and Ordnance Works, that he has resigned.
